

The Foundation Effect (Building Businesses That Run Themselves Book 1)

Building Businesses that Run Themselves: Part I -- The Foundation Effect brings a dozen vintage management tools together and builds a framework of cause and effect. It is titled The Foundation Effect because it is about doing things right and ensuring that your business is operating at its highest effectiveness given what it has been doing to date and where it is positioned in its industry. It encourages a business to ensure that it has a strong foundation and provides tools for foundational analysis and improvement. It makes sense out a confusing set of topics that have come and gone in popularity and shows the importance of paying attention to the framework factors and bringing about increased alignment. By applying the Performance Framework to your business, you can reduce waste and increase efficiencies which lead to happier employees, more satisfied customers, and saving time and money.
