

that something has put your son with ADHD on edge, try to distract him. Part of what makes meltdowns less likely is just general good life. You're always, always on edge. ADHD is a condition that both children and adults can have. clients with time management, organization, and anything else they need to be successful in life. . Parenting With ADHD Trying to balance your career, family and personal life with attention deficit disorder Supporting the mothers needs becomes an integral part of helping a child