

The Office: Jokes, Quotes, and Anecdotes 2002 Day-To-Day Calendar

A recent study surveyed vice presidents and personnel directors at one hundred of America's largest corporations. The results revealed that 84 percent thought employees with a sense of humor do a better job than people with little or no sense of humor. Now that grinning, giggling, chortling, and sniggering may soon be job requirements. The Office: Jokes, Quotes, and Anecdotes 2002 Calendar might very well become as ubiquitous in offices as the paper clip. Back for a third year, this amusing compilation of comments on the absurdity of office life will lift the working masses to new heights of hilarity. With observations such as Indecision is the key to flexibility, and Management is like a tree. It is made almost entirely of wood, this calendar encourages workers to laugh at themselves (and more importantly, at their bosses) every day. Its all part of the job.
