

A Major Seduction (Good to Go Book 2)

His little sister's best friend has grown up too much for this Marine to handle without a little discipline to keep her in check. Major Mike Cava has done his best not to see Maria Thompson as anything but his baby sister's best friend. Not an easy feat when Maria's done her best to throw herself at him for years. But now that he's returned to the East Coast and with his family again, he feels easier about handling little Maria. Except in the two years since he's seen her last, Maria has grown way up. Good God, she's stunning. But now that he's really seeing her, she isn't seeing him. No more jumping into his arms or smiling and flirting. A bland hello and she's leaving to go hang out with some other guy. Oh hell no. Maria spent the past fourteen years mooning over a man who never saw her as anything but a little girl, and she's done. Or so she tries fooling herself. She's twenty-four years old, and it's past time she grew up and over him. But now Mike's giving those looks. He's acting jealous. She realizes that she's not over him yet, and maybe one of her old plans to stir his interest might work this time around. With the help of her best friend Mike's sister, she'll prove she's more than a woman enough to handle him. His dominance, his kink in the bedroom, his huge, hot body. But just when she thinks they can make a go of it, he pulls back. She can't do it anymore. Loving, being hurt, loving, being ignored. This time if Mike wants her, she'll have to prove it. She's done. And he's just realized he might have made the biggest mistake of his life in pushing her away.
