

Women in the Inquisition: Spain and the New World

Ana Domenge, who later founded the Dominican convent in Perpignan, composed a written account of her spiritual intimacies with God while being held in terrible conditions in a secret prison in Barcelona. Ines of Herrera del Duque, a leather tanners twelve-year-old daughter whose messianic prophesies captivated both children and adults, was burned at the stake along with many of her followers. Nine years after the death of Catarina de San Juan, the Inquisition banned copies of her image and biography, fearing that a cult was forming around this popular holy woman in Puebla, New Spain. Inquisitors enlisted the assistance of Mari Sanchezs daughter to prove that this Jewish converso was guilty of practicing Judaism in secret, an accusation that led to her death. In Women in the Inquisition, Mary E. Giles brings together scholars from literature, history, and religious studies to explore womens experiences under the Inquisition in both Spain and the New World. Based on fresh archival work, the essays provide a broader perspective on the Inquisition than has previously been available. Examining the stories of fifteen women in the context of this fearful Catholic institution in both Spain and the New World, the contributors chronicle a broad range of crimes against the Catholic Church, including sexual transgressions, the practice of crypto-Judaism, and the writing and preaching by alumbradas that undermined Catholic orthodoxy. The accounts, representing the experiences of girls and women from different classes and geographical regions, also include the trials vastly divergent outcomes ranging from burning at the stake to exoneration.

Hispanic American Historical Review 80.2 (2000) 349-350 Although numerous women were prosecuted or investigated by the Spanish Inquisition for almost Women in the Inquisition : Spain and the New World /. Saved in: 1 Pt. I: The Inquisition and Jewish Converts 1: Mari Sanchez and Ines Gonzalez: Conflict and: Women in the Inquisition : Spain and the New World: Based on fresh archival work, the essays provide a broader perspective on the Inquisition Women in the Inquisition: Spain and the New World. Edited by Mary E. Giles. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press, 1998. Pp. ix, 402. Available in: Paperback. Ana Domenge, who later founded the Dominican convent in Perpignan, composed a written account of her spiritual. Fourteen compelling case studies of women persecuted by the Inquisition in Spain and the New World offer an enriching perspective on its marked changes Women in the Inquisition: Spain and the New World. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press, 1999. 402 pp. The past two decades have witnessed a flurry of: Women in the Inquisition: Spain and the New World (9780801859328): Mary E. Giles: Books. Buy Women in the Inquisition: Spain and the New World by Mary Giles (ISBN: 9780801859328) from Amazons Book Store. Everyday low prices and free Women in the Inquisition: Spain and the New World. Edited by Giles Mary E.. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press, 1999. xii + 402 pp. Get this from a library! Women in the Inquisition : Spain and the New World. [Mary E Giles]